Flack Global Metals Unifies Operations Under One Brand

Pacesetter Brand Transitions as Company Aligns Service Center Platform Under Unified Identity

JUNE 26, 2026 (Kennesaw, Georgia)— Flack Global Metals (FGM) today announced the consolidation of its Pacesetter operations under the FGM brand, bringing together decades of service center expertise and customer relationships under a single unified identity.

The transition reflects the evolution of the business and the way the organization already operates today, combining service center execution, supply chain solutions, and market intelligence into one integrated platform designed to better serve manufacturers across North America and reflect the integrated platform that FGM has built over the last several years.

Founded in 1977, Pacesetter built a strong reputation for reliability, responsiveness, and customer-focused service. Since joining the FGM platform in October 2024, the organization has become increasingly integrated with FGM's broader capabilities, creating a seamless experience for customers while expanding access to inventory, market insights, and supply chain expertise.

"This transition is a natural evolution of our business," said Jeremy Flack, Founder and CEO of FGM. "The operational reach and customer relationships that made Pacesetter successful remain. By aligning under one brand, we can better represent the full scope of our capabilities while continuing to deliver the service and execution our customers have come to expect."

Customers will continue working with the same teams, facilities, and operational leaders they know today. Existing commitments, service levels, and customer relationships will remain unchanged as the company moves forward under the FGM name. The transition to the FGM brand will be implemented across facilities, communications, and customer-facing materials over the coming months.
